COURSE LEARNING OUTCOMES

Nu	Explanation
LO1	Students will gain an understanding of the philosophical foundations of research methods.
LO2	Students will be able to explain difference between three fundamental research designs.
LO3	Students will acquire required skills to apply a theory to a research design.
LO4	Students will be able to conduct a literature review to formulate research questions and demonstrate the rationale of the research.
LO5	Students will be able to formulate hypotheses for a quantitative research and gain ability to test hypotheses.
LO6	Students will be able to design a survey to address the research questions.
LO7	Students will gain a critical understanding of qualitative approaches in research.
LO8	Students will be able to design and conduct a semi-structured interview or focused group discussion.
LO9	Students will acquire basic skills to report qualitative and quantitative research findings.

- Course Title : Forensic Science
- Course Language : Turkish
- Course Objective : Revealing the link between the perpetrator and the crime constitutes the basis of criminal investigations. Within the framework of today's human rights, there has been a rapid transformation from the principle of "Suspect to Evidence" to the principle of "Evidence to Defendant". Especially since early 2000, the tendency towards scientific investigation methods have increased both in the judicial system and in law enforcement. Both relevant institutions and universities have made serious investments in this direction.
